

OHR Website Redesign Announcement

The Office of Human Resources (OHR) has been working over the past year to redesign the OHR website. We've collaborated with several Institute and Centers (IC) focus group volunteers and OHR Subject Matter Experts (SMEs). We've been keeping you in mind as we made changes to the look and feel, functionality, and content. Want to know what's in store? We've included HR contacts in a central repository, audience pages which provide quick links to topics on our site, centrally compiled HR frequently asked questions (FAQs), an intuitive navigation, and restructured content in plain language to be understood by all.

The OHR website is scheduled to launch Fall 2017.

New Design Elements

HR contacts lists have been compiled into a central repository allowing the user to filter and find their benefits contact, leave contact, or retirement contact. We're continuing to grow these lists and will be adding more contacts for you to connect with.

We've created Audience pages for new, current, and retired employees. Users can now go to these specified pages and see quick links to content that pertain to their background.

Have you ever had a question looking through our site but couldn't find the answer? We'll now you can browse and search through our frequently asked questions (FAQs). We've compiled all FAQs on the OHR website in a central repository and identified each question to a particular topic. So if you're on the leave section you can see related leave FAQs right at your fingertips.

Ease of Use

We've simplified the navigation focusing on topics only on the OHR website and restructuring labels so it's intuitive for our average user.

We've moved several topics to either the Jobs at NIH website or IntraHR website streamlining the scope of the OHR website. This will allow the audience of our particular websites to find the information they need in the appropriate site.

Plain Language and Content Restructuring

Want to be able to easily filter and find competencies for your job? You can do this in the redesign as we've compiled this data from the Learning Management System (LMS) now allowing you to filter by groups of competencies or by name.

We worked with a plain language expert to modify the content on our site with the goal of making it easier to read and using terminology understood by all.

If you have any feedback prior to the website launch, please provide comments in the feedback form.
